The hydrological design of the Habitat Trails project retains stormwater on site and slows its flow by increasing the amount of pervious surface. Image courtesy of the University of Arkansas Community Design Center.

Places: Forum of Design for the Public Realm is published three times a year by the Design History Foundation, a nonprofit, charitable organization that sponsors a range of educational, publishing and research activities. The Foundation's mission is to establish forums in which designers, public officials, scholars and citizens can discuss issues vital to environmental design, with particular emphasis on public spaces in the service of the shared ideals of society.
