

UC Berkeley

Places

Title

Contributors 9:2

Permalink

<https://escholarship.org/uc/item/3520g7zq>

Journal

Places, 9(2)

ISSN

0731-0455

Publication Date

1994-07-01

Peer reviewed

Cynthia Abramson

is an arts administrator with a background in art history, public art and urban planning. She currently works as a public art and transportation specialist with Project for Public Spaces in New York City.

Alice Adams

has been an artist member of the design teams of the downtown Seattle transit project, the Metrolink light rail system for St. Louis and the Ronkonkoma Station of the Long Island Railroad. She also participated in the preparation of a planning document/request for proposals for the Midland Metro transit system for Birmingham, England.

Francoise Bollack

received her architecture degree from the Ecole Speciale d' Architecture and studied at the Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Beaux Arts in her native Paris. Her New York City-based practice has received a number of preservation awards. She teaches Columbia University's historic preservation program and is active in several civic groups.

Myrna Margulies Breitbart

is a professor of geography and urban studies at Hampshire College, in Amherst. Her teaching and writing focuses on the role of the built environment in social change; gender, race, and class relations in housing and environmental design; urban public space; and the child in the city. She works with women's development corporations, urban public art agencies and inner-city children.

Jacques Cabanieu

is secretary general of the French government's Interministry Mission for Quality Public Constructions.

Ethelind Coblin

is a New York architect whose projects include residential, municipal and nonprofit institutional work. She has worked with Robert A. M. Stern Architects, Johnson Burgee Architects and Fox & Fowle Architects, and graduated from Vanderbilt University and the University of Kentucky.

Jessica Cusick

is Director of Public Art at the Cultural Arts Council of Houston/Harris County, where she is developing a public art and urban design plan for Houston, and an adjunct professor in the University of Southern California's public art studies program. Previously, she founded and directed the public art program at the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority.

Jean-François Decaux

is chief executive officer of JCDecaux. He is in charge of international expansion for the company and responsible for activities in 12 countries besides the U.S.

Inés Elskop

received her Licentiate in Asian Studies with Honors from Universidad Del Salvador in Buenos Aires. She holds a B.A. in Economics from Fordham University and has pursued graduate studies in architecture at Princeton University. Since 1991 she has been in practice with Christopher Scholz, Architect.

Denise A. Hall

is principal of D.A. Hall Architects, a New York City-based firm involved in commercial, residential and industrial work in the U.S. and Europe. Her projects have been published in the U.S. and in her native Brazil. She studied at Parsons School of Design, The New School for Social Research and City College.

Hugh Hardy

is an architect, lecturer and author and founding principal of Hardy Holzman Pfeiffer Associates, where his work has included the renovation or restoration of numerous cultural facilities and landmarks. He is a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects and active in New York's Architectural League and Municipal Art Society.

Robert S. Harris

is director of the University of Southern California graduate program in architecture. In Los Angeles, he is co-chair of the Downtown Strategic Plan Advisory Committee and of the mayor's advisory panel for the plan. He is a founder of the Urban Design Advisory Coalition and vice-president for advocacy of the Los Angeles Conservancy.

Margot Jacqz

has been a search and recruiting consultant to architecture and design organizations since 1983. She has been managing editor of Skyline and a contributing editor of Interiors magazine, and she contributed the architectural notes for the first edition of the Access Guide to New York. She received an B.A. in architecture from Princeton University.

Lucien Kroll

is an architect and town planner in Brussels. His work has included the design and redesign of social housing projects, which have been noted for their approaches to resident participation.

Fumihiko Maki

was educated at the University of Tokyo, Cranbrook Academy of Art and Harvard's Graduate School of Design, where he later served as associate professor. He also has served as professor at the University of Tokyo between 1979 and 1989. He continues his practice since his establishment of his firm, Maki and Associates, in 1965.

Pasqual Maragall

has been mayor of Barcelona since 1982. An economist, he has degrees from the University of Barcelona and the New School for Social Research.

Wellington Reiter

is an architect, public artist and assistant professor of architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is currently designing an exhibition on the subject of "Inhabited Bridges" for the Centre Georges Pompidou in Paris.

Kees Rijnboutt

has been state architect of the Netherlands since 1990 and is a professor of architecture at Delft University.

Raymond Turner

is design director of the British Airport Authority.

Thomas Walton

is professor of architecture at the Catholic University of America.

Pamela Worden

has designed an administered comprehensive public art interventions along urban arteries such as riverways, roadways and mass transit systems. She is founder and president of UrbanArts, Inc., a Boston-based non-profit public art agency whose most recent initiative is "Blue Hill: Avenue of Arts."

Rudy Bruner Award
for Excellence in the Urban Environment is pleased to announce

*R*EBUILDING COMMUNITIES:

Re-creating Urban Excellence

The fourth Bruner Foundation book on urban excellence will be available soon.

Granted every two years, the Rudy Bruner Award was given for the fourth time in 1993. Each cycle of the Award has culminated in the publication of a book describing, in depth, the process of selecting the Award winners.

Rebuilding Communities: Re-creating Urban Excellence by Jay Farbstein and Richard Wener will be published this summer by the Bruner Foundation.

Single copies of Rebuilding Communities will be available free of charge from:

The Bruner Foundation
560 Broadway
New York, New York 10012
Phone: 212 334 9844
Fax: 212 334 9842

Applications for the current RBA cycle are now available.